The rifle was presented to the Nizam of the Decan, the ruler of the state of Hyderabad, in South Central India, by the Prince of Wales on the tour, and is engraved on the rib "H.H. The Nizam of the Decan from H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, KG, GCSI 1876". It carries a gold oval engraved with the Royal crest and the Order of the Star of India. It was in its original makers case with the Nizam's name on the lid.

As Gavin Gardiner explained: "In October 1875, Albert Edward Prince of Wales, the eldest son of Queen Victoria, embarked on an extensive tour of the Indian subcontinent. Here the Prince visited more than 21 towns and cities before returning to England in May 1876."

He continues: "British monarchs and members of the Royal Family undertook lengthy tours to strengthen ties with other countries, and also to learn more about the culture and history of those regions. The Prince of Wales' tour of India was envisaged as a way of forging diplomatic links between the Indian rulers and the British Crown. The Prince exchanged gifts with each ruler he met and a number of rifles were ordered from Purdey as well as Alexander Henry to be given as gifts during the tour. Purdey's records indicate that two rifles were presented to the Nizam, the other is now in the collection of the Royal Armouries."
